TRI-AGENCY OPEN ACCESS POLICY ON PUBLICATIONS

REMEMBER OF RESEARCHER OBLIGATIONS UNDER THE TRI-AGENCY OPEN ACCESS POLICY ON PUBLICATIONS

If you are a Tri-Agency grant recipient, you are contractually obligated to make your research outputs open access within 12 months of publication. The York University Senate Policy on Open Access is designed to help researchers meet this Tri-Agency requirement and to support all York researchers to publish in open access.

To meet open access policy requirements, remember the following:

• An effort to publish in open access does not automatically come with additional processing costs. In the greater majority of cases, a researcher will not need to pay an author processing charge (APC) to publish in open access within 12-24 months of publication. In fact, many commercial journal publishers allow for a version of an article to be deposited free of charge in an open access repository. This is called “green” open access.

• Keep the final author-created version of your publication manuscripts (also known as author-accepted manuscripts (AAM)). The AAM is the last version of your accepted manuscript, including all changes made after peer-review before any typesetting or copyediting by the publisher. You will need this version of your article to meet the requirements of the Tri-Agency and Senate policies on Open Access. Please note that proofs or publisher PDFs cannot be used as author-accepted manuscripts.

• Contact the Libraries to deposit a copy of your article in an open access digital repository such as YorkSpace. The Libraries at York are here to help simplify your efforts to publish in open access and offer consultation services to help you enhance visibility and impact of your research. To respond to open access requirements, please forward a copy of your author-accepted manuscript along with the full citation for your paper (including the DOI of your paper) to opendeposit@yorku.ca and the Libraries will contact you with additional information on next steps.

• Want to negotiate better terms with your publishers to secure your rights to publish open access? Contact the Libraries at opendeposit@yorku.ca to book an author rights consultation or visit our website to find out more.
